Döda Fallet (the dead fall) Nature reserve

Döda Fallet nature reserve comprises 31 hectare of land and is situated in the valley of the river Indalsälven. The area lies 150-160 meters above sea level. Döda Fallet became a Naturminne (natural heritage place) already in 1926 and since 1983 the area is a nature reserve.

During the night of 6 June year 1796 the landscape here was dramatically changed forever. In only 4 hours the entire lake Ragundasjön was drained and a disastrous tsunami tore down the valley! The waterfall Storforsen was silenced and left in its wake a dry canyon, today called Döda fallet, the Dead Falls.
